Interpretation Guidelines:

Article 42.01 - Accumulation

1. Regular full-time employees earn 1.5 working days sick leave per month.
2. Regular part-time employees earn sick leave based on a percentage of hours paid per month [See Article 42.01 (C) for the actual formula]. Hours paid for the purpose of accrual of sick credits include any extra shifts the RPT employee is able to pick up [See Arbitration Award: Fraser Burrard Hospital Society (Royal Columbian Hospital) and BCNU, December 13, 1995 (Munroe)].
3. Casual employees working in a temporary appointment under Article 17.02 (B) are entitled to accrue and take paid sick leave for during the time they are working in the temporary appointment [See Article 11.04 (G) (5)]. Their sick leave bank is frozen when they finish the temporary appointment. See below for further details.
4. Casual employees who take a temporary position pursuant to Article 17.03 change their employment status to regular and accrue sick leave for the duration of the temporary position. When the position is over their sick leave bank is frozen and can be revived when the casual employee either posts into another temporary position under 17.03 or Article 17.02 pursuant to Article 11.04 (G) (5) or posts into a permanent regular position.
5. Sick leave credits may accumulate to a maximum of 156 days.
6. A regular employee covered by the Extended Work Day Memorandum receives 10.8 working hours credit (pro-rated for RPT)

Article 42.02 - Payment

1. All regular employees receive regular pay for each day of sick credit used.
2. Regular part-time employees who have been pre-scheduled to work extra shifts are entitled to use sick credits if they are unable to report for the extra shift(s) due to illness [See Arbitration Award: Fraser Burrard Hospital Society (Royal Columbian Hospital) and BCNU, December 13, 1995 (Munroe)].

The interpretations in this manual are provided on a without prejudice, errors and omissions basis to any position Unions in the Nurses' Association of Bargaining Agents may take in any arbitral proceeding or any other forum.

Article 42

Article 42.03 - Proof of Illness

1. Sick leave with pay is only payable because of sickness or injury. This includes sick leave due to cosmetic surgery [See Arbitration Award: HEABC (Cancer Agency) and BCNU, August 25, 1997 (Larson) - the arbitrator said "there are no words in Article 42 that restrict entitlement to paid leave to whether a particular type of surgery is covered by the Medical Services Plan or even to whether it is medically necessary".
2. Regular employees (and casual employees in temporary appointments) may utilize sick leave credits if they are unable to attend work due to reasons associated with pregnancy, childbirth and/or recovery. There have been occasions where Employers have suggested an employee start their mat leave early, however this issue was arbitrated and the Union won [See Arbitration Award: University Hospital (UBC Site) and BCNU, October 18, 1988 (Hope) - the Employer was ordered to pay sick leave benefits, the arbitrator wrote: "exceptions to the entitlement to sick pay for pregnancy-related illness had to be defined in clear language"].
3. Sick leave for stress is payable, if it shows itself in a physical or mental disability which results in the employee not being able to perform his/her job.
4. A doctor's certificate may be requested only after the employee has been on sick leave for more than three consecutive days. Employees should be advised before their return to work, if a doctor's certificate is required.
5. Employers cannot enforce sick leave policies that make it mandatory for every employee to provide a doctor's certificate for all sick leave [See Arbitration Award: Nav Canada and Canadian Air Traffic Control Association (CATCA), February 18, 2000, 86 LAC 4th 370 (Brault)].
6. The information on a doctor's certificate may be restricted to:

Short term absence:

- Confirming in general terms the medical reasons for the absence;
- General information about the approximate date of return;

Long term absence: (New in 2006: Please see information on the Early Intervention Program in the Tools Section)

- Prognosis
- General information about what, if any, limitations should apply to the employee upon their return to work to ensure the safety of themselves, co-workers and the public.

Article 42

The Employers right to information needs to be balanced by the employee's right to privacy. Also see Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act (FIOPPA).

- The Employer cannot ask for details that exceed the general nature of the condition such as asking what medications or special treatments the employee is receiving (except perhaps in the situation where the employee is seeking an accommodation; however in that situation the employee should be working with a Steward and/or LRO who will determine what information is appropriate to share).
 - The Employer cannot contact the employee's physician directly without the permission of the employee, as this would violate the employee's privacy rights. If the employee has signed a release of information this allows the Employer to contact the employee's physician directly. However the Union strongly discourages employees from signing a release unless the release has been reviewed and agreed to by the Union (i.e. by the LRO).
 - Once the employee provides the doctor's certificate the onus shifts to the Employer to prove it is not enough.
7. Where the Employer rejects a doctor's certificate, it must be on reasonable grounds. [See Arbitration Award: Parkridge Private Hospital and BCNU, March 10, 1992 (McPhillips) - the arbitrator found that the employee had provided sufficient and adequate information to the meet the onus of proving a bona fide illness and the Employer was found to be acting unreasonably in seeking further information].
 8. The Employer must advise the employee of the reasons for the rejection and give the employee an opportunity to obtain the necessary information. Examples where a doctor's certificate has been rejected:
 - Where the doctor has seen the employee after the illness is over;
 - Where the certificate has been given on the basis of a telephone conversation without a physical exam;
 - Where employees or witnesses provide concrete evidence that demonstrates that the employee was not ill (i.e. it is not enough to say that the employee was observed shopping at a store).
 9. Employers cannot require an employee to see a doctor of the Employer's choosing. However they can require the employee to take a medical examination [See interpretation guidelines under Article 32.02 for the conditions that apply].
 10. The PCA does not provide for an employee to be reimbursed for a doctor's certificate under Article 42. 03 (See Arbitration Award: Richmond Lions Manor and BCNU, January 21, 1997 (Kelleher) - the arbitrator determined that this was not a "medical exam" as described in Article 32.02 Medical Examinations where the cost is reimbursed.

Article 42

Article 42.04 - Benefits Accrue

1. Employees on paid sick leave continue to accrue all the benefits of the PCA. For example: vacation, special leave credits, seniority, health benefits coverage etc.
2. Where an employee has used up all her/his accumulated sick time and are placed on an unpaid leave of absence, they come under the provisions of Article 37. Therefore they will only continue to accrue all the benefits for the first 20 days of unpaid LOA.
3. Employees who choose to use sick leave credits to "top-up" their LTD benefit are not entitled to benefits coverage and accrual after 20 workdays on LTD [See Arbitration Award: Nicola Valley General Hospital and BCNU, July 2, 1992 (Hope)].

Article 42.05 - Notice

1. Employees are required to notify the Employer, before the start of their shift if they are going to be absent due to sickness.
2. Employees, who are unable to complete their shift due to illness, need to advise their Employer before leaving the worksite.
3. Employees are required to notify the Employer before returning to work.
4. Employers cannot enforce a sick leave policy that requires employees to advise their Employer of their absence a specified number of hours in advance of the start of their shift and a specified number of hours in advance of the subsequent return to work (See Arbitration Award: Rosewood Manor and HEU [1990], 15 LAC[4th] 395 [Greyall])

Article 42.06 - Expiration of Sick Leave

1. Employees who don't have enough sick leave credits to cover their sick leave are placed on an unpaid leave pursuant to Article 37 until they are in receipt of LTD benefits.
2. Employees who have worked 600 hours in the previous 52 weeks or since their last claim are eligible for 15 weeks of sick leave benefits under Employment Insurance.

Please Note: It is very important that employees, who are placed on unpaid leave, make immediate arrangements to pay the premiums of their health plans to ensure they maintain their entitlement to LTD [See Arbitration Award: Nicola Valley General Hospital and BCNU, July 2, 1992 (Hope) - dealt with the issue of employees having to pay the health plan premiums to maintain access to benefits while on LTD]

Article 42.08 - Enforceable Legal Claim

Article 42.09 - Appointments

Article 42.10 - Six Months Service

New employees who are not covered by the portability provisions of Article 51 and don't complete 6 months service with the Employer, are required to pay back the Employer for any paid sick leave taken within the first 6 months.

Article 42.11 - Cash-In of Sick Leave Credits

1. Employees leaving the workforce (e.g. retiring), on or after their 55th birthday, are entitled to a 40% pay out of their sick leave credits at the employee's current rate of pay at the time of leaving.
2. If the employee returns to work after the payout, she/he will be starting with no credits in her/his sick bank and will not receive a second payout on any subsequent departure from the workforce.
3. Employees terminated for cause are not entitled to a payout under this provision.

Article 42.12 - Sick or Injured Prior to Vacation

1. Employees who are sick or injured before they start their vacation are entitled to have their vacation replaced with sick leave and their displaced vacation returned to their vacation bank to be used at a later date.
2. When an illness occurs on a regular day off connected to the employee's vacation, the illness will be considered to have occurred before their vacation [See Arbitration Award: Surrey Memorial Hospital and RNABC, June 28, 1979 (Hall) - the collective agreement at the time did not contain language regarding sick or injured prior to vacation].

The interpretations in this manual are provided on a without prejudice, errors and omissions basis to any position Unions in the Nurses' Association of Bargaining Agents may take in any arbitral proceeding or any other forum.

Article 42

Article 42.13 - Voluntary Treatment

1. Employees who are in voluntary attendance at a full-time treatment program for substance abuse are entitled to use sick leave credits and are placed on unpaid leave if their sick leave bank has expired.
2. In certain situations unsatisfactory work performance, following completion of a treatment program may still result in termination of employment [See Arbitration Award: Royal Inland Hospital and BCNU, April 23, 1992 (Munroe) - deals with application of a "last chance" agreement]. However, there are more recent awards that speak about the lack of enforceability of "last chance" agreements. Basically, the process is the same when any employee is terminated; the facts of each individual situation need to be carefully assessed.

Sick Leave Policies:

All sick leave policies and/or attendance management programs (and any revisions) need to be reviewed by Stewards in consultation with their LRO. The following criteria are provided to assist in the evaluation of these policies:

(A) The Arbitration Award: Lumber and Sawmill Workers Union and KVP Co. Ltd. (1965) 16 LAC 73 (Robinson) set out the following requirements for Employer policies and are included to be used as a general guideline in evaluating sick leave policies and/or attendance management programs (and any revisions):

1. The policy must not be inconsistent with the collective agreement;
2. The policy must not be unreasonable;
3. The policy must be clear and unequivocal;
4. The policy must be brought to the attention of the employee, before the Employer can act on it;
5. The employee concerned must have been notified that a breach of such a policy could result in discharge, if the policy is used as a foundation for discharge;
6. Such a policy should have been consistently enforced by the Employer from the time it was introduced.

A 2002 Labour Board decision upheld the arbitration award dismissing the grievance of HEU on the Employer's unilateral implementation of an attendance management program at Royal Jubilee Hospital. HEABC (Royal Jubilee Hospital) and HEU, BCLRB No. B112/2002. The original arbitration award has been used by Employers as a template for attendance management programs. However subsequent decisions applying the principles of "undue hardship" associated with the duty to accommodate may change how these attendance management programs are applied particularly with regard to non-culpable absenteeism.

The interpretations in this manual are provided on a without prejudice, errors and omissions basis to any position Unions in the Nurses' Association of Bargaining Agents may take in any arbitral proceeding or any other forum.

Article 42

Non-Culpable Absenteeism:

Non-culpable absenteeism is an absence from work due to illness or non-occupational injury, including absences that may be the result of a disability.

The objective of attendance management programs developed by Employers is to reduce absenteeism and provide evidence where necessary for termination due to culpable (the employee's at fault) or non-culpable absenteeism (it's not the employee's fault).

Since the Supreme Court of Canada decision in BCGSEU and The Government of the Province of BC as represented by the Public Service Employee Relations Commission ("Meiorin"), September 9, 1999, Arbitrators and Human Rights tribunals are ruling that Employers need to apply the same test to non-culpable absenteeism as they do in other duty to accommodate situations. As a result Employers have to meet a much higher standard of proof, to successfully defend a termination for non-culpable absenteeism.

In applying the Meiorin test, Employers have to demonstrate that the chronic absenteeism of an employee cannot be accommodated and is causing them undue hardship.

The Meiorin test was applied in two recent cases: Parisien v. Ottawa-Carleton Regional Transit Commission [2003] C.H.R.D. No.6 and Corporation of the Town of Ingersoll and London Civil Employees Local 107 (2003) LAC 4th as follows:

Parisien v. Ottawa-Carleton Regional Transit Commission [2003] C.H.R.D. No.6 is a Human Rights case dealing with a termination for non-culpable reasons. The employee had logged nearly 2000 days absence over 16 years, mostly related to his recurring problem of post-traumatic stress. The Tribunal found that the complainant was exposed to prima facie discrimination in that he was terminated for not meeting the Employer's standard of attendance due to a condition of disability.

1. The Tribunal applied the Meiorin test to assess whether the standard of attendance required by the Employer could stand as a bona fide occupational requirement.
 - They determined there was a rational connection between a rule designed to maintain a reasonable level of attendance and the requirements of the job; however
 - In considering the 3rd element of the Meiorin test, the tribunal concluded that the Employer failed to establish that the attendance management program was reasonably necessary to the accomplishment of the purpose of maintaining reasonable levels of attendance since the Employer could not demonstrate that Mr. Parisien could not be accommodated without due hardship.

Article 42

2. The Tribunal clarified the following:
 - Tolerating or living with disability-related absenteeism is an appropriate and required form of accommodation.

The hardship attending Mr. Parisien's past and future absenteeism did not constitute undue hardship (The Tribunal accepted the evidence that included costs of driver's salary, potential overtime costs for replacement drivers and potential complaints from transit users if services were disrupted due to Mr. Parisien's unexpected absences).

3. Important messages:
 - The duty to accommodate includes tolerating disability-related absences.
 - Tolerating or living with such absences means refraining from treating such non-culpable absenteeism as inconsistent with the employment bargain.
 - Employers of any significant size are likely to be expected to tolerate a significant amount of disability-related absences.

Corporation of the Town of Ingersoll and London Civil Employees Local 107 (2003) LAC 4th was an arbitration case dealing with a termination for non-culpable reasons. The employee's absences (158.45 days between 1999 and 2003) due to chronic migraine headaches were considered to be excessive when compared with the average sick time usage of 6-7 days per year. The Town had attempted to accommodate the employee by implementing a 4 day work week. However the employee was still absent more than the average number of days each year.

1. The arbitrator applied the Meiorin principles reasoning that absences arising out of a disability under the Code cannot be relied upon to justify termination of employment for non-culpable absenteeism unless there has been accommodation of such disability-related absences to the point of undue hardship.
2. The arbitrator accepted and considered the evidence of inconvenience to other co-workers and the replacement cost per year estimated to be approximately $3000.00. However in applying the legal test for undue hardship, the arbitrator concluded neither the inconvenience nor the financial cost constituted undue hardship.

Important Lessons from these two cases are:

1. Employers need to adjust historical approaches to managing and responding to non-culpable absenteeism if the absenteeism relates to a disability.
 - Absenteeism rates compared to other employees are irrelevant;
 - Number of absences is irrelevant; in the absence of evidence of undue hardship.
2. The duty to accommodate disability-related absenteeism requires that Employers tolerate disability-related absenteeism unless they can demonstrate that the amount of absenteeism for the particular Employer would create an undue hardship.

Article 42.07 - Leave - Workers' Compensation

Related Articles: 32, 42, 47, Appendix B, Appendix E, Appendix F, Appendix G, Appendix I, Appendix V, Appendix W

Interpretation Guidelines:

Every year 1200 -1400 nurses are injured at work.

* What to do if you're injured at work *

Failure to document injuries means claims are turned down. Every year some 100 BCNU members are forced to file appeals after WCB turns down their initial claim. That means that nurses may wait 3 years or more to receive payment from WCB. Many of these appeals would have been unnecessary if, at the time of injury or illness, the nurse had provided detailed information about the specific incident at work that caused the injury or illness.

1. Tell your Employer first:

Do not wait to tell your Employer. Employers often protest claims from nurses who waited more than a couple of days to report an injury.

It's a requirement of WCB that you report your injury to your Employer as soon as possible. The WCB Act requires that a claim for compensation be filed within one year except in exceptional circumstances, such as mental incapacity or coma.

For example: A nurse who suffers a back injury while lifting a patient may not take enough notice of the incident because they are about to start four or five regular days off and believe they will be OK by the time they return to work. But if they don't report the incident until after returning to work, WCB may question whether the injury occurred at work or on the nurses' days off.

Ensure the WCB and your Employer know you're injured by filling out an application for compensation form and an incident report form, which should be located at every nurses' station;

Make sure you send the application form to the WCB and give a copy to your Employer and keep another copy for your own records.

If a BCNU OH&S Steward is on shift, you may want to contact her/him for advice.

2. You must see your Doctor as soon as possible after suffering a workplace injury.

3. After suffering a workplace injury or illness, do not phone your Employer to say you're sick. Instead, state that you're missing a shift because of the work related injury or illness.

Article 42

4. Remember to identify the specific incident each time:
 - when filling out the application for compensation and the incident report
 - when talking with your Employer, and
 - when visiting your Doctor.

5. Tell the Workers' Compensation Board (WCB):
 - You must fill out a WCB Application form.
 - Describe the incident and injury in the same way as you described it on your Injury Incident Report form and in your Doctor's report.
 - If the symptoms change, report that as well.
 - Take your time when filling out any WCB claims forms.
 - Always remember, the more details you supply, the easier it will be for WCB to accept your claim.
 - Include all the details. Many nurses whose claims were eventually denied by WCB understated what they were doing at the time of the injury.

For example: Don't just state you transferred a patient from the wheelchair to a bed. WCB may refuse your claim because it doesn't describe what caused your injury. Instead include all pertinent information, such as "the patient's knees buckled and I caught him before he fell to the floor. As I caught him, I twisted my back. That is when the injury occurred".

If a WCB officer calls, ensure you have a copy of your Injury Incident Report form to refer to. The agent will ask a number of questions, many of which you answered earlier on the form.

Be certain your answers are the same as the ones you've given throughout the process. Your credibility - which is extremely important - is at stake.

Never display anger. An angry response might make it easy to conclude your problems are emotional, rather than injury related.

The details of all of your conversations with the WCB are entered into their files so it is advisable to keep notes of any conversation you have.

Questions and Answers about WCB

Q What should I do if WCB denies my claim?

Contact the BCNU office immediately to request assistance with your appeal.

Q What should I do if I return to work before my workplace injury is totally healed?

If you should return to work but continue to suffer from symptoms, it is extremely important to continue seeing your Doctor at least every 4 weeks. Ensure the specific nature of your condition is noted. That way if you're forced to take more time off, you will have built up the appropriate documentation that will help WCB reopen your claim.

Article 42

Q What happens if WCB terminates my claim while I am still totally or partially disabled from a work-related injury?

Contact BCNU immediately. Labour Relations Officers who specialize in WCB appeals are there to help members file an appeal.

Q Should I continue to see my Doctor after my WCB claim is accepted?

Yes. Visit your Doctor every 2 weeks while on claim. Also, if your claim lasts for more than a few months, you should be seen by a specialist.

Q What do I do if I receive a letter from the WCB saying that "I have the right to appeal" - even though I already have an appeal in progress?

Phone the BCNU office immediately - you need to respond to every letter you receive from the WCB regardless of the status of your appeal.

Once the WCB claim is accepted:

1. You are away on "paid WCB Leave".
2. If the claim is accepted, the Employer is required to adjust the credits deducted from your sick leave bank.
3. Employers are entitled to receive periodic updates on your fitness and disability.
4. If you are a regular employee on paid WCB leave: the WCB generally sends the wage loss payments directly to the Employer and the Employer pays you. The amount that the WCB pays to your Employer may be different than the amount that you are entitled to receive under the collective agreement.
5. If you are receiving wage loss benefits you are entitled to net pay for the duration of your compensable injury or illness.

Net pay is calculated by subtracting normal deductions from normal earnings. Normal earnings for the purposes of net pay calculations includes:

- Extra shifts for regular part-time employees;
- Shift differential;
- Weekend premium;
- Responsibility pay;
- Statutory holiday pay;
- Overtime (including call-back).

6. You must pay to the Employer any amount you receive for loss of wages in settlement of any claims, including amounts received directly from WCB in respect to wage loss. You are not required to pay the Employer any wage loss benefits that you received for work at another employer (e.g.; if you are casual at another worksite).

The interpretations in this manual are provided on a without prejudice, errors and omissions basis to any position Unions in the Nurses' Association of Bargaining Agents may take in any arbitral proceeding or any other forum.

Article 42

Benefit Entitlement (for nurses not covered by Article 42.07 (A))

1. Workers injured after June 30th 2002 are entitled to receive tax free wage loss benefits at the rate of 90% of their average net earnings from all employers. Before June 30th 2002, WCB calculated benefits at 75% of the worker's gross average earnings.
2. Average net earnings are determined after Federal and Provincial income taxes, Canada Pension Plan (CPP) contributions and Employment Insurance (EI) premiums are deducted from gross average earnings.
3. Benefits cannot exceed the maximum set out in the Workers' Compensation Act (WCA). Benefits are adjusted for inflation annually, at the rate of 1% less than inflation, to a maximum of 4% in a year.
4. If you are working at more than one job, you need to report your wages from all other jobs as you are entitled to benefits for all jobs.

HEABC (Royal Columbian Hospital) and NBA, February 10, 2001 (Larson) - a nurse who is off on paid WCB leave should be paid a cheque equal to the amount she would be receiving if she were at work. This includes overtime if the employee would have worked it normally. The award also dealt with the calculation of "net pay", specifically the deductions the Employer could make from gross pay. These include:

Article 42

Income tax - the Employer is limited to a notional amount because income tax is not actually deducted or paid to the Government.

CPP and EI - while the period in which a nurse is paid Workers' Compensation Benefits is not a period of insurable purposes, the arbitrator said that these deductions should continue to be paid in order to arrive at net pay even though not required by law.
